WHOLE LEGISLATURE IS SUMMONED BEFORE GRAND JURY BY MORAN IN BRIBE INQUIRY

Entire Body to be Heard in Wholesale Investigation of Scandals Affecting Legislation---Seventy-five in First Batch Called For.

The entire Massachusetts Legislature must appear before the Suffolk Grand Jury before the end of the week to testify as to the bribery scandal. District Attorney John B. Moran issued summonses to-day for seventy-five members of the House of Representatives, commanding them to appear before the Grand Jury to-morrow morning to testify.

To-morrow he will summon the remainder of the Senators and Representatives in the Massachusetts Legislature. He said that it is his purpose to examine them all his week, or, if this is impossible, to extend the sitting of the Grand Jury until they can all appear.

The seventy-five men for whom summonses have issued are the first seventy-five in the alphabetical list of the House.

There are 240 members of the House of Representatives and forty members of the Senate.

This development in the legislative scandal that has so excited the State follows the knowledge that a fund of $70,000 was raised by the bucket-shop proprietors of Massachusetts, to be used in the defeat of hostile legislation. It was contributed to by bucket-shop men in cities and towns through the State. Much of the fund has already been expended on Beacon Hill.

Big Corruption Fund.

These facts have been generally known to those familiar with the inside of things political at the State House for the past twenty-four hours.

It has been further known that the disposition of the great corruption fund was placed in the hands of amateurs, green lobbyists—and that they made a mess of it. To this is due, to a large extent, the publicity of the scandal which shadows the House of Representatives, and which has resulted in attention by the grand jury, which rumor has it, has already indicted at least one legislator.

Those persons who have knowledge of inner circles on the Hill are aware that the big fund which was raised to defeat hostile legislation was placed in hands unskilled in Massachusetts lobbying. Those who handled it were not well known on Beacon Hill. They pursued less circuitous methods than those usually adopted there. It is common knowledge that they purchased from fifty to eighty votes.

In securing men to carry out their plans the bucket-shop interests overlooked "Jake" Wardwell and "Bob" Southworth, whose experience would probably have prevented such publicity, and secured the assistance of comparative amateurs.

Used Real Money Freely.

The work they did bears its effect in the present investigation. They did not know just who to approach, they used real money with much greater freedom than do the old war horses of the Third House, and they failed to address their subjects with the same mystery and skill that would have marked the efforts of a Wardwell or a Southworth. The lobbyists at the State House contemplate the crude work with a mixture of amusement and anger—amusement that it should have so thoroughly demonstrated the value of leaving such things to people who know the ropes thoroughly, and anger that such a scandal is likely to lessen their own usefulness in the future.

A new policy was adopted among the legislators in handling the scandal subject to-day. From the first moment of their arrival at the State House it appeared that the password "Mum's the word" had been passed to each. Not one would speak of the bribery scandal.

When news reached the House of District Attorney Moran's action in summoning all the members there was consternation, mixed with an affectation of amusement, on the part of some of the legislators.

$228,542.12 IN HEARST RELIEF FOR SUFFERERS

Doctors and Scientists to Watch Developments of Earthquake Babes.

FEAR THEY'LL BE FIREBUGS

The Hearst fund for the relief of the California sufferers from Boston and other cities throughout the country to-day totalled $228,542.72.

Dispatches from San Francisco to the BOSTON AMERICAN say that General Greely yesterday fed 223,915 people, 10,000 fewer than the day before.

All the babies, say dispatches from the stricken city, numbering some half a hundred, born in the improvised camps in Golden Gate Park and on the Mission Hills while San Francisco burned, have been carefully listed by a coterie of physicians and scientists, and the development of the character of each is to be carefully watched for the effects of parental influence.

"We have the names and probable addresses of all the parents," said a prominent physician, "and we expect interesting things when the little fellows begin to develop individually. The shock of the terrible earthquake and the great fire that followed will surely, through their effect upon the mother at the time, have some peculiar effect upon the child.

Some express fear that some of the babies may turn out freakish.

CANADA'S GIFT OF $100,000 ACCEPTED BY SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9.—Mayor Schmitz at yesterday's meeting of the construction committee elicited applause by reading the following telegram from Toronto:

"The Canadian Parliament voted $100,000 for the relief of San Francisco, which was declined by President Roosevelt. It is still awaiting acceptance. Will you take it if offered direct? Please rush answer.
"TORONTO DAILY STAR."

James D. Phelan, chairman of the finance committee, was asked to answer the message at once in the affirmative.

BOSTON OUT OF LOTTERY SLIPS

Lottery tickets of the Honduras Lottery Company are as scarce as hens' teeth in Boston. This proves that the recent raids of the government officials on the plant at Wilmington, Del., and in New York were fully as successful as claimed.

At the time the raids were announced the local agents told their Boston customers not to worry, as they did not keep all their eggs in one basket. It was said that the tickets for the June drawings would be on sale as usual and at the same time.

But there has been a slip. Somebody blundered or somebody fibbed, for the tickets are not here and not likely to be. As the government claims that the tickets for June and July were captured, local customers now think that they will have to wait until August.

Total $10,725

Out of several fires in Boston during a twelve-hour period last night, nine are believed to have been set. They caused an aggregate damage of over $10,000. The fire and police inspectors are working busily on the cases, looking for the firebugs who operated in such wholesale manner in one night.

In South Boston four mysterious fires were fought within a radius of six blocks, and in none of the cases can a satisfactory cause be determined upon by the firemen. In these particular cases boys are believed to be responsible, and the South Boston police under Captain Westcott are searching that section to-day for a gang which is also believed to have caused many fires during the Winter along the Dorchester avenue section.

Straw Hats in Flames.

The basket house is the Co-operative Manufacturing Company on Congress street. The firm lost $8,500 in panama straw hats and wool suit cases, there being about 1,000 of the cases and 500 hats in the flames.

The Metropolitan Belt Company, located on the floor under this factory, also lost $1,500 in a blaze which occurred earlier in the evening. The loss is to stock and machinery.

At midnight a blaze broke out in the office of the American Radiator Company, on Stillings street, and in the same section as the others above. Books and papers, with office furnishings damaged, amount to $1,000.

Two half-burned candles and a bunch of burned paper was found in the basement of the dwelling house at No. 44 Winthrop street, Roxbury, early this morning. The building is owned by A. F. Walker and the damage caused to the lower floor amounts to $500.

Stock of Cotton Lost.

At 8:15 in the morning a fire was discovered in a batch of 200 bales of cotton at D and Fargo streets, South Boston, owned by Israel Dissus, a junk dealer at No. 101 Dorchester avenue. The damage amounted to $200. The cotton was bought after a fire a week ago in the building of Adams Brothers, and was stored in the open while being dried and rebaled. Watchmen have guarded it through the night, and were there in the daytime. Boys are said to be directly responsible.

JAY GOULD IS BEATEN BY ENGLISH CHAMPION

LONDON, May 7.—Eustace Miles, champion court tennis player of England, will retain his title through defeating Jay Gould, champion of the United States, whom he played this morning in the final tournament for the championship of England and the United States.

It looked as though Gould would win the series at the outset. He played brilliantly and won the first set, 6—4. After this Miles seemed to steady down, and through superior headwork won the the next two sets, 6—1, 6—4.

The final set provoked excitement such as is seldom seen at a contest of this kind. It proved to be a victory for Miles, however, 6—3.

Gould is the son of George J. Gould of Lakewood, N. J., and recently won the championship of the United States. This is his first year on the court, and his work has caused the greatest astonishment among followers of the game.

BROCKTON'S MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMAN ASKS DIVORCE FROM EX-MAYOR'S SON

Mrs. Eva M. Keith Tells Sensational Story of Her Married Life.

Left Husband Until 1905, When She Came to Boston to Earn Living.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, May 9.—The decision of the court in the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Eva M. Keith, the most beautiful woman in Brockton, against her husband, Will C. Keith, whom she is alleged to have found in a hotel with another woman, was expected to be announced late to-day.

Mrs. Keith's testimony in the case created a sensation. Her beauty made her a prominent figure in Brockton society for years, and her was a picture when she took the stand. Although about forty years old, she had all the freshness of youth and seems hardly more than an elder sister to her son, Zibe Keith, who is in his seventeenth year.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith were married in 1887. He is a son of Zibe Keith, Brockton's first Mayor and a member of the Executive Council under Governor Greenhalge. They met at the City skating rink in the days when roller skating was the rage. She was then Eva Place, and her beauty and ability as a skater attracted the admiration of hundreds.

When she took the witness stand she was gowned in black, with black hat and long black kid gloves. She said she was now living in Holbrook.

"I was married to Willie C. Keith in 1887," she testified.

"Until April 3, 1905, we lived together. I objected strenuously and constantly to his indifference and his association with other women. We had quarrels.

"Then I left him and went to Boston to earn my own living. It was at his suggestion.

"In November, 1905, I went to a hotel in this city. My husband entered with another woman. I followed them to their room.

"I looked at it immediately after he left it and he had registered for a room for himself and wife.

"He saw me on the way out and bowed.

"Not long after he returned and went upstairs to a room.

"I followed, demanding to know who his companion was, and when I knocked on the door which he had entered, he came to the door.

"When he saw it was I he slammed the door in my face.

"I listened and heard them laughing, and heard the pouring of liquors."

BRITISH FLEET TO FORCE THE DARDANELLES

Second Cruiser Squadron Is Due at Piraeus to Reinforce Beresford's Flotilla.

MALTA, May 9.—The second British cruiser squadron, under the command of Prince Louis of Battenberg, is expected to reach Piraeus to-day, to join the fleet of Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, which is being assembled close to Turkish waters to make a naval demonstration in case it is necessary for Great Britain to take such action to enforce her ultimatum to Turkey requiring the withdrawal of Turkish troops from Tabah.

LONDON, May 9.—Many British naval officers believe Admiral Beresford will take his fleet up the Dardanelles before the Egyptian affair is settled. They believe, too, that the Sultan would prefer that he should do it and make a vigorous demonstration close to Constantinople rather than content himself with sending Turkish ports and islands in the Mediterranean in order that he may convince his advisers that Great Britain is much better power to tie to than Germany.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 9.—The Sultan has not yet shown any signs of backing down in the face of the British ultimatum demanding the withdrawal of Turkish troops from Tabah. The Turkish ruler is becoming sullen, owing to two surprises he has encountered during the present crisis, namely, the aloofness manifested by Germany and the determination shown by Great Britain.

Germany has not only abstained from giving encouragement, but on Sunday the Kaiser sent an autograph letter to Abdul Hamid counselling him to yield.

This latter irritated the Sultan greatly, and this is responsible for the detention of the German sailing vessel Odysseus in the Bosphorus.

GERMAN ENVOY RETAKES SEIZED SHIP UNDER FLAG

LONDON, May 9. The German sailing vessel Odysseus, from Romania, while discharging a cargo of beans at Port Lagos, was detained by the Turks and taken to Kavak, where the boat was anchored under the guns of the forts. The reason for the seizure is not stated, but is that the Turks suspected there were explosives aboard the vessel.

The German ambassador was unable to get any satisfaction from the authorities in regard to the matter, and sending three men aboard the Odysseus, taking his flag with him, and had her moved out under the protection of the German flag. The vessel will now be allowed to proceed on her voyage.

Wednesday, May 16, has been decided upon for the reopening of the Park Theatre, with the series of moving pictures of the San Francisco disaster.

TEA NOTES.

English Breakfast tea is a term applied to all black teas, but there is a wonderful difference in the flavor and healthful qualities of English breakfast tea. In England to-day practically all the tea used comes either from Ceylon and India. These teas are fast acquiring a world-wide reputation because of their healthful and delightful qualities, many people abandoning Coffee on account of its injurious effect to their health. The most delicious of all teas to-day is that sold in the lead packets under the name "SALADA." The Green teas of this brand are fast displacing the adulterated article from Japan, as they are absolutely pure. It will pay you to get a trial package from your grocer. These teas received the Highest Award and Gold Medal at the St. Louis Exposition in 1904.

RUNAWAY N. Y. BOYS GO BACK WITH MOTHERS

Three of the New York runaway boys who came to Boston to camp out in the woods, returned, camping outfits and all, to their homes to-day, in charge of the mothers of two of them. The fourth boy, Fred Buckley, will follow later under the charge of a New York policeman, as he is wanted on a charge of larceny in that city. Buckley has no parents or home, although he gave his address as No. 114 Second place, Brooklyn.

The other boys are Clarence Boyce, sixteen years old, of No. 388 Thirteenth street, South Brooklyn; James Shay, thirteen, No. 144 Clermont avenue, Brooklyn, and William Moore, sixteen, of No. 83 Hall street, New York.

Mrs. Mary F. Shay and Mrs. Alma Boyce came to Boston this morning and went to the Brewdway station, South Boston, where Captain Westcott had the boys in charge.

The lads were repentant runaways. After some lecturing on the part of the two mothers the boys agreed that they would be good and go home. They also promised not to try to leave the train on the way to Providence and to remain on the boat going down the Sound to New York. Captain Westcott stood by and eyed the boys until they had made all their promises. Then he said things to them about the terrors of camping out in Boston woods.

Mrs. Moore was unable to come to this city for her son and Mrs. Boyce and Mrs. Shay acted for her in taking the Moore boy back home.

Malt Gives Beer High Nutrition

Eight-Day Malt, Exclusive Product of an American Brewery, Makes the Richest Beer.

Malt is the life of beer. Our readers understand, of course, that in brewing beer the first thing to do is to make the malt from which to make the beer. The richer the malt the more nutritious, the more wholesome the beer. Pabst learned years ago that the process method of making malt in three or four days could not possibly be accomplished with, losing in large degree the life-giving strength giving elements of the barley. Most breweries use this old process. It is quicker, easier and less expensive. The Pabst way gives the full richness of the grain to the beer. It doubles the expense of brewing, but it makes Pabst the fine leader of all beers.

Pabst Beer is the richest beer in actual food value and strength building elements because it is made only with Pabst eight-day malt. Careful test, practical experience in brewing always with an eye single to the very best product possible has taught Pabst that malt made of grain grown in this country must have eight days in which to properly mature. Malt perfect in nutritious elements can only be made by following the process of Nature without crowding, and that is what Pabst does. He makes his own malt by an exclusive eight-day process, double the time and double the expense of the common four-day method. This Pabst process gets all the good out of the barley and into the malt. No other process does.

Pabst eight-day malt, made from fine barley, grows as naturally as it would put in the ground, moistened by the rain and warmed by the sun. Nature aids waste, and in the eight-day process there is no forced unnatural growth that wastes the elements of the grain. The result is a beer that has the greatest food value, the greatest tonic value, yet is mild, pleasant, superior in taste and perfect in age, purity and strength.

300,000 WILL ASK THE GOVERNOR TO COMMUTE TUCKER'S SENTENCE

Attorneys for Condemned Boy Say Petition Will Break All Records.

With nearly 4,000 names added to the gigantic petition that is to be presented to Governor Guild and his Council to save the life of Charles Louis Tucker, within the last twenty-four hours, the attorneys for the condemned boy believe that when it is presented at the State House there will be attached to it the signatures of 300,000 people.

"I expect there will be 300,000 names or more by the time it will be necessary to stop accepting them," said James H. Vahey of counsel for Tucker, to-day. "The names are coming from all over the country. They are coming from all classes of people. The feeling that predominates the signers is that they do not believe that Louis is guilty of the crime for which he was condemned to die."

Even during the excitement that prevailed throughout the country during the early days of the California disaster, when the number of dead was supposed to be many times what it proved, citizens of Massachusetts and throughout New England did not forget that death in the most ignoble manner menaced Charles L. Tucker.

It is expected that the next day will fully equal the record of the last twenty-four hours. The blanks for signatures that were distributed through the State are beginning to be received at the office of Vahey, Jones & Mansfield, in the Kimball building on Tremont street, and they contain the way from 50 to 500 names each.

Lawyer James H. Vahey, who has made such a strenuous fight for the condemned young man since his arrest for the murder of Mabel Page, more than two years ago, is bending every effort to make his final move in behalf of his client successful.

Signatures will be received at his office until Saturday evening, May 12. The day when the petition will be presented to the Governor has not yet been decided upon. An effort will be made to have it so as soon after next week as possible.

Tucker is sentenced to die in the week beginning June 10, and ten days before that he will be removed from the East Cambridge Jail and placed in the death cell in the State Prison at Charlestown, where he will be executed unless the Governor interferes.

Tucker is keeping up remarkably well, it was said to-day at the East Cambridge Jail. He eats and sleeps about the same as he has since his long incarceration began. He is now buoyed up with the hope that the Governor, in response to the petition and those of his thousands of friends, will save him from the death chair.

TUCKER'S MOTHER GREETS HIM WITH FAITH AND HOPE

By Eleanor Ames.

THIRTY-TWO days!

And though it brings what the law says shall be his day of doom so much nearer, Charles Louis Tucker welcomes this thirty-second day, for it means a visit from his mother.

Before the day is very old, a pale-cheeked little woman, dressed neatly in black, and carrying a basketful of selected delicacies, will enter the office of the East Cambridge jail.

She will be greeted cheerily and welcomed as a friend.

For two long years, through changing seasons, with check-like regularity, Mrs. Lucy Tucker has been visiting the jail.

At first she came twice a week, on Wednesdays and Sundays. Recently she has been permitted but one visit a week, and has chosen Wednesday as the visiting day.

With a patient, brave, pale smile, she will leave the basket with the officials for examination and then go to the room where she will meet her son.

"How is Louis to-day?" This question invariably follows her greeting.

Brave, loyal little mother! The great, busy public, with its many personal concerns, has no real conception of what these two awful years must have meant to her, of what she has suffered and endured, of how she has hoped and prayed and fought.

Faith Has Never Wavered.

It is a marvel to me that she is alive. That she is well and active and able to smile and hope is nothing short of miraculous.

Her faith in her son has never wavered.

Not for one instant has she considered the possibility of his guilt.

"I know he never did it," she has said to me time and again when we have talked over the case. "I know he never did it. That, all, I don't need any proof of his innocence. I know it."

With all the soul-harrowing suspense of the two past years, scene after scene stand forth in Mrs. Tucker's memory like hideous nightmares.

One is the time when she sat in the sentence and heard her son convicted of murder.

Another is the day that an anonymous letter reached her, saying: "Your son is dead. Call at the jail for his body."

This was the worst of all.

She has told me, with tears streaming down her face, that she has never known how she reached Cambridge the day of that awful hour, nor what she did or said; that even now there are nights when she wakes sobbing and shivering over the experience in her dreams.

Charles Tucker's love for his mother is the strongest factor in the complexity of his make-up.

Folds Her in His Arms.

He always greets her with smiles and words of endearment. He folds her in his arms and kisses her again and again, looking upon her face hungrily.

"Mamma," the dear, old, childish name, springs naturally to his lips.

He questions her about his father's health, about the home life.

He tells her to be better, brave, even as he is brave, and believes all will yet be well. He declares his innocence.

But, to-day, as mother and son sit hand in hand looking into each other's eyes, a great heaviness will rest upon their hearts. Though their lips will smile as they have smiled to help each other, and their words will be full of hope, an awful dread will be present.

Each realizes that time is speeding away and the end is drawing near.

Unless something is done to prevent this monstrous deed of execution, mother and son will have but four more visits after to-day.

Only four more times may this brave little mother gaze upon the features of her first born.

Only four more times may Charles Tucker know the comfort of his mother's embrace and belief and devotion.

Face Hideous Possibility.

If the law takes its cruel course, it will send on June 10 to this loyal, loving mother a lifeless body of what was once her well-loved son—a son in whom she believed to the very last.

Mrs. Tucker knows this hideous possibility.

Charles Tucker knows it. May 16, 23, 30, June 6—and then no more.

Think what it means! Never again to be able to hope and work and struggle to save one in whom you believe.

To feel that, unjustly, a human life which you have borne has been legally, but horribly, snuffed out.

To have the fiendish suspense of believing and yet not quite knowing.

To be obliged to live on, year after year, haunted by this hideous memory.

Think and bow low with respect and admiration before the almost superhuman courage of a woman who can endure and suffer and smile in the very face of such a contingency.

NAME SCHOOL FOR PROFESSOR

As a tribute to Professor Christopher Columbus Langdell, the Board of Overseers of Harvard University have decided to name the new law school building "Langdell Hall." Blindness compelled Professor Langdell to give up his work in the Harvard Law School five or six years ago. But it was not until he had seen the dream of his life made a reality at Harvard in the establishing of the case method of studying law. Text books were gradually relegated and actual law from the decisions of the courts substituted.

Langdell Hall, which will cost $850,000, is to stand northeast of Austin Hall, the present law school building, in Cambridge. The new law building is to be completed July 1, 1907.

ENGINEER HURT; LINER HELD UP

The Leyland line steamer Bohemian was held up for half an hour to-day, just as it was to leave the docks in East Boston, by an accident to Henry Hoey, the fifth engineer. Hoey was "limbering up" the engine which operates the steering gear and got caught in the machinery. His left leg was badly lacerated, a piece of flesh six inches long being torn out of his thigh. The leg was broken in two places below the knee. Dr. Dougal of the ship attended him, and later he was removed to the Relief Hospital. Hoey's home is in Ireland. The boat left at 10.30 o'clock.

Two Boston passengers were aboard, Captain James Murdock, Chamber of Commerce pilot, and Miss Kathleen Johnston.

SINGS SCOTCH SONGS AT 102

NEWBURYPORT, May 9.—Mrs. Catherine Campbell Langland, who was born 102 years ago to-day in Scotland, celebrated her birthday very quietly. During the morning fully half of her friends and neighbors called upon Mrs. Langland. She makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. John F. Young.

At their request she sang a Scotch song which had been a favorite of her girlhood days. Mrs. Langland came to Newburyport nearly seventy years ago. Until age prevented she attended church regularly at the Fourth Congregational Church.

Dr. and Mrs. John F. Young and John F. Young, Jr., are her only living children. Mrs. Langland is in good health and she called many of her friends by name. She usually takes short walks around her daughter's home every day. She retires early and sleeps like a child.

COUNT 'REGGIE' WARD'S FIRST WIFE IS DEAD

One of Newcomb Family of Kentucky, Noted for Its Misfortunes.

HER FATHER ONLY LEFT

Boston friends of Count "Reggie" Ward were shocked today to learn of the death of his first wife, the beautiful Edythe Newcomb Ingraham, who, in Scotland She divorced him in 1903 and married Nathaniel Ingraham, grandson of Justice Ingraham.

Her death is almost the last chapter in the tragedy of the famous Newcomb family of Kentucky. H. Victor Newcomb, her father, was a multimillionaire railroad king, and now a broken old man in New York, is probably the only member of the family left.

For half a century the history of the Newcomb family has been one of trouble and death. Fifty years ago the mother of H. Victor Newcomb became suddenly insane, and threw three of her children from the fifth story of their home in Louisville. All three were killed.

Later the Newcombs went to New York. With millions at his command, H. Victor Newcomb plunged into the world of fashion, plunged into the world of finance. He became president of the Louisville & Nashville road.

Married to Reginald Ward.

His daughter, Edythe, was a beauty and a great favorite in New York society. In 1899 the social aspirations of Reginald Ward of Boston carried him to New York. He could not attain the position he desired in Boston. Soon after his arrival in New York he paid court to and married Edythe Newcomb. Their wedding was one of the brilliant events of the season, and when the Wards went to Europe on their honeymoon they were feted on all sides.

Soon after came the fortunes of H. Victor Newcomb began to decline. He lost the presidency of the Louisville & Nashville, and made unfortunate speculations, and in 1899 his wife declared that he was insane. His affairs were placed in the hands of a committee and in the sensational suit that followed, every skeleton in the Newcomb closet was exposed.

Before this was forgotten Mrs. Ward sued Count "Reggie" for divorce. A decree was granted in 1903, and the next September she married young Ingraham in Pekenstone, England. Count "Reggie" remarked when he heard of the marriage, that he was not surprised, that he had expected it for some time. He said he was on good terms with his former wife and that her marriage did not disturb their friendly relations.

Separated from Second Husband.

In July, 1905, Mrs. Ingraham and her husband separated. Ingraham then sued his wife for the fulfillment of an alleged ante-nuptial agreement by which she was to pay him $1,000 a year. He also asked that she be ordered to pay him $4,000 a year in accordance with a bond she was said to have made in his favor.

Mrs. Ingraham declared that her husband obtained the contract by fraud, and that his "disbarred lay by various insidious devices, such as getting drunk, and institute divorce proceedings against Count Ward, and also induced Count Ward to consent to the agreement.

This suit was settled out of court and an agreement reached. Now comes the news of her death.

MARRIED? YALE MAN SAYS 'NO;' 'YES,' SAYS ACTRESS

Miss Hammett? Or is actress in "The Social Whirl" wife of J. Edward Copps, rich Yale Senior?

Wealthy Senior Gives Out a Flat Denial to Marie Hammett of "The Social Whirl."

Now J. Edward Copps, the wealthy Yale senior, says to-day from his home in Rutland, Vt., that he is not married to pretty Marie Hammett, the vivacious show girl in "The Social Whirl" company.

Miss Hammett demurely announced last night at the Casino Theatre, New York, where the show is playing—that she became Mrs. Copps recently, and that the ceremony took place in Hartford, Ct. She even gave the name of the clergyman, a Rev. Mr. Goodell.

Boston theatrical people and patrons, with whom the pretty show girl is quite popular, are asking to-day, is Miss Hammett, Mrs. Copps, or just Miss Hammett, and was there a marriage or is it just a mistake somewhere?

Played at Majestic.

Miss Marie played at the Majestic Theatre here this past season. "The Social Whirl" having a week's engagement. Joe Coyne, Boston will remember, was the star. Miss Hammett had many friends in Boston and was entertained here quite a lot. But she certainly gave no intimation that that she was to marry.

Copps is a nephew of Thomas W. Mahoney of Rutland, Vt., who is one of the leading lawyers of the Green Mountain State and who was counsel for Mary Rogers. He is twenty-one years old and was the only heir of a wealthy mother.

As soon as the announcement of the wedding was made in New York by Miss Hammett, queries were sent to Rutland, and they brought forth the statement that none of Copps's relatives there knew anything about the marriage.

Copps Gives Denial.

Then a query was sent to Hartford, Ct. And that brought forth the statement that there was no clergyman by the name of Goodell in that city, despite Miss Hammett's declaration that such was the name of the officiating clergyman.

To-day's dispatch from Rutland gives a denial from Copps himself, adding more to the conflict of statements.

Miss Hammett was a Weber & Field product, making her debut as a chorus girl five years ago in the Weber & Field Music Hall before that famous pair of comedians split and was in vaude for hire.

CIGAR STRIKE BREACH WIDENS

Determined to show the employers that they intend to fight to the end, the striking cigarmakers are planning to visit in a body the seven factories which refuse to accede to their demands and remove all their tools.

Some of the men went to the factories for their tools Monday, but were advised to leave them. This they considered a sign that the strike would not last long. Now, however, they are not so sure.

The "Big Six" factories and J. F. McGreevey, which employs about 1,300 men, still refuse to accede to the demands of the strikers. A meeting will be held in the Paine Memorial building Friday night to make further plans for the strike.

The strike committee to-day decided to stamp control cards from nine to four o'clock daily. The first strike benefit will be paid Saturday.

GUARD ALL OF PETERSBURG TO SAVE CZAR

Elaborate Precautions Taken to Foil Plot at Douma Opening.

IT IS A MOTLEY CROWD

ST. PETERSBURG, May 9.—To protect the Czar from assassination at the opening of the Douma at the Winter Palace tomorrow the most extraordinary precautions have been taken, and the arrangements are now complete.

In order to prevent disorders and protect the Czar, the city will be patrolled and even small crowds to assemble. Every person on the streets will be closely watched, and if the suspicions of officers are aroused no time will be lost in putting the suspicious individual under arrest.

The people will not even be allowed to see His Majesty when he arrives in the city. The royal yacht in which the Emperor will make the trip to the city will dock at the quay opposite the Winter Palace. On leaving the yacht the Czar will only have to ascend a flight of twenty-five stairs to reach the safety of the palace.

No One Allowed on Quays.

The entire stretch of quays along the Neva will be guarded by the police and military, and no one will be allowed on them early morning until after the departure of the Czar. The Emperor will leave the city as soon as he has said his address from the throne to the Douma.

Street gatherings of every description will be forbidden. Squads of cavalry will disperse any that may form, and the police may try to assemble. All shops, factories and offices will be closed, and the government has even gone so far as to give orders that all flags on roofs and buildings must be flown high in the air. The purpose of this is to prevent revolutionists from getting possession of the flags and using the red bunting in them in starting counter-demonstrations.

Every effort will be made to impress the members of the Douma with an idea of the strength of the bureaucracy. All the leading members of the bureaucracy will surround the Czar as he reads his address from the throne. Among those who will support the Czar as he performs this part of the ceremony will be members of the Holy Synod, governors of various provinces, prefects and marshals of the nobility, army and navy officials and the Grand Dukes.

Even the Grand Duke Alexis, who was recently sent into exile in disgrace, has been recalled to participate in this ceremony and lend strength to the parade of the bureaucracy, and has arrived here.

Address a Colorless Document.

The Czar's address to the Douma is merely a "mop-gag"—that is, a speech designed to enlighten or encourage the Douma members. It emphasizes the stability of the Fundamental Laws as an indication of the supremacy of the autocracy, and asks the co-operation of the legislature in the regeneration of Russia. There is no doubt that the address will be a unsatisfactory and will give rise to much hard feeling among the representatives of the people against the ruler.

Most of the Douma members have arrived in the city, and the personnel of this newest of national Parliaments has aroused much comment. The Douma will consist of the most "mixed" lot of legislators which the world has ever seen. Every social rank is represented in the assembly from cultured, high-principled gentleman down to rough and illiterate peasants.

Over Half Are Peasants.

Of the 418 elected members 219 are peasants, 105 are noblemen, 41 are citizens of towns, nine priests, and there are 44 others who represent no particular class. Three hundred and forty-two of the members belong to the Russian Church, seven are Jews and the balance are Lutherans, Catholics and Mussulmans. Nearly 200 of the members cannot write, but all can read.

There are four parties represented in the assembly, embracing 230 Constitutional Democrats, 155 Extremists, 33 Churchmen and 20 ultra-Conservatives.

The peasant members have already started the campaign they propose to wage for land reforms. They declare that if they return home without having obtained more land for the peasants they will be killed as traitors.

They openly declare their willingness to die in the Douma, fighting for land reform, but say they will not leave until they have accomplished the work they have set out to do, even if bayonets are used against them. The peasants are the only members in the assembly who are united in a program of action. It is generally believed that their demands will be accepted by the Government.

Will Lunch at Palace.

The Douma will not begin its sitting until 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, after the ceremony at the Winter Palace and a luncheon, which will be served to members at the palace. The first business of the assembly, after organizing, will be to draw up a reply to the Czar's address. This will probably not be ready until next week.

Scant facilities have been provided for having the proceedings of the Douma published. The accommodations for press representatives are small and few tickets have been issued to foreign correspondents.

GETS RAILWAY IN MAINE FOR DEBT

ROCKLAND, Me., May 9.—The property of the Rockland, South Thomaston and Owls Head Street railway was sold at sheriff's sale yesterday to Michael Serotto of Boston, to satisfy a claim of $17,482 allowed him by the Supreme Court for unpaid services in the construction of the road.

The railway is in the hands of two receivers, Arthur F. Littlefield and F. T. Kimball, who were appointed, one for the creditors and one for the bondholders. Mr. Serotto has filed a bill in equity, which will probably be heard this week in Augusta, asking that the receivership of the road be dissolved.

FOIL DYNAMITE PLOT ON LIFE OF KAISER

POLICE FIND EXPLOSIVES IN CASTLE WHERE EMPEROR WAS TO VISIT.

BERLIN, May 9.—A dangerous Anarchist conspiracy to murder the German Emperor has been discovered and frustrated at Urville, near Metz, where the Emperor has a castle. Kaiser William is to arrive at his Urville castle Friday next for a visit lasting several days.

To-day the police discovered a large quantity of dynamite on the premises sufficient to demolish the whole palace at one stroke.

Investigations were immediately begun, and as a result five foreigners were placed under arrest. They have been identified as notorious Anarchists. Documents found in their possession prove that they had a most elaborate plan for the murder of the Kaiser, and every detail had been worked out. The plot had been operating for a short night undetected by those in charge of the palace and grounds. It was planned that the Emperor had a narrow escape from being blown to pieces, and with all others who happened to be in the palace.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

One hundred and fifty-one book and job printers are still on strike in this city, according to the eight-hour statistician in the current issue of the Typographical Journal, the official organ of the International Typographical Union.

In answer to the claims by the Typothetæ, the organization of master printers, that the union has forced nearly the 8-hour, which began January 1, the Journal says:

"Admitting that 40 per cent (45,000) of the total number of compositors (45,000) are 8-hour men, they formulate 54,000 book and job men for which an accounting must be made. The total number of union positions working eight hours is 38,815. Deducting the newspaper membership of 14,270 we have 20,539 book and job men on an eight-hour basis. Where are the other 6,872 of the total of 27,414 book and job members? Four thousand seven hundred and eighty-two are on strike and 2,063 are working nine hours under contract.

"Sixteen months ago the book and job membership of Omaha having the eight-hour day for all book and job men did not exceed 2,500. We have therefore put 18,000 book and job men on an eight-hour basis in sixteen months. Is that faring badly?"

GIGANTIC GRAB BILL FOR BOSTON ELEVATED

CAMBRIDGE TRANSIT SCHEME INVOLVES THE SEIZURE OF MILLIONS FROM PUBLIC.

The Boston Elevated Company's latest scheme is to grab irrevocably property of the people worth millions of dollars by means of a legislative bill. The great Traction Trust has a plan now before the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs to receive, as a gift, franchises in the streets of Cambridge, the right to build an elevated structure in certain narrow Boston streets, where property values would be killed by the act, and even the perpetual right to occupy Charles River dam with a new dam, which is to be built at a cost of many millions of dollars.

There has been much secrecy about the proposed legislation. It has been apparent that the Boston Elevated officials, as well as their friends on the committee, desired to keep the public in the dark as to their intentions, perhaps with the object of suddenly rushing the deal through the House and Senate during its closing hours.

The examination of the proposed measure, which is known as House bill No. 603, now in the hands of Chairman Andrew J. Peters of the principal streets of Cambridge for practically the whole length of each, and parts of four transfers received. The executive board will meet Friday evening at Wells Memorial Building.

"THE GREAT AUTO CHASE."

By Thompson Peel.

CHAPTER XXV.

An Innocent Victim.

DAVIS was a man who decided upon a course of action quickly, and before the great audience had subsided its clamorous applause, he had seized his hat and was making his way out of the theatre. He glanced back once as "Ballara" appeared to kiss her hands to admirers who would not be satisfied, and once again exclaimed "By Jove!"

When he reached the sidewalk he paused a moment to wipe the perspiration from his forehead and try to select the wisest course to pursue. The audience that had formed in his mind on his recognition of the passage at arms.

"Ballara," he repeated to himself. "Why of course. Even without the photograph I ought to have been able to connect the two. Well, here goes."

He made his way to the stage door, where the usual crowd had collected to see the famous dancer leave one of the theatres. A carriage, with two impatient horses attached, was drawn up at the curb and a policeman was endeavoring, vainly, to keep the passage clear. He ordered the crowd, several times, to move on, but it was an orderly, well behaved crowd, good natured to the extreme, and the policeman himself was curious.

Davis waited a long time and with great difficulty, finally reached the stage door and rapped on it. It was opened in a few seconds and Davis briefly stated his business.

"Can you give me the name of Miss Ballara's Hotel?" he asked.

"Nope," the doorkeeper responded abruptly. "Against the rules."

He tried to close the door, but Davis' foot prevented it and the door open further. He shoved in an elbow to hold the advantage he had gained and emitted affably into the scowling face of the doorkeeper.

"I know that," replied Davis, as he quietly placed a bill beneath his programme and pushed it through the opening. "I am a very old friend, and I only wanted to know if I would be right in sending a letter to the Lorraine."

The doorkeeper turned aside and took a look at the bill under the programme.

"Better try Vandyke," he said in an undertone. "It's more likely."

"Thank you," said Davis, and he mingled once again in the crowd.

Half an hour or so later a heavily veiled and closely cloaked figure from the stage door, but notwithstanding the attempt at disguise the crowd recognized the little dancer and surged around her.

An old man, bent with age, pressed forward and spoke to her.

"Let my poor child, miselo, and let's have a look at your pretty eyes," he said.

The policeman rushed to him sharply, and several in the crowd tried to pull him aside. But the old man persisted and threw him a red rose.

She entered the waiting carriage, and the crowd gave a cheer, each one claiming for a rose. The driver, startled by the sound, suddenly plunged forward. The old man was thrown to the curb and fell, but in spite of his efforts they reached the carriage first. It was opened and upon it a great red bearded man who swung at the bill, while others struck at his assistants. The horses were finally brought to a stand.

Before the bystanders had recovered from the astonishment the red giant had disappeared. When the carriage was opened the door of the carriage and steps of the hotel she found was the girl in the senseless figure of a young girl.

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

FIND POISON IN COAT OWNED BY MUENTER

It is reported from Chicago that the powder found in a small box in the coat pocket of Erich Muenter, the missing Harvard instructor, wanted for the mysterious death of his wife, has been analyzed and found to be poison.

The food and water taken from the Muenter home in Cambridge are now in the possession of Professor W. F. Whitney of the Harvard Medical School and will soon be analyzed to ascertain whether or not they contain arsenic.

They were removed from Cambridge police headquarters to Boston yesterday afternoon in the patrol wagon by Captain Hurley and Lieutenant Deehan. They had been kept under lock and key in the office up that time.

It is not known just when the analysis of the food will be made, but it is expected within a few days.

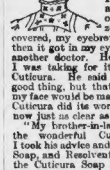
Chief of Police Pullen of Cambridge said that now that the police have the possession of Professor Whitney, he does not know just when he would receive a report of the physicians' findings. He said that the action of Professor Whitney must be awaited.

From Wheaton, 21., twenty-eight miles west of Chicago, comes the latest clue to Muenter. Frank Hagerman, a lawyerman in the town, says that in answering the description of Muenter, except that his hair had been shaved off, engaged a rig a days ago to take him to a farm nearby. The man was seen by the manager of the Chicago Telephone Company, who corroborated Hagerman. The sheriff of Kane county started last night for the farm.

DISFIGURED WITH ECZEMA

Brushed Scales from Face Like Powder—Under Physicians Six Months But Grew Worse—Some Said Face Would Be Marked for Life—Now Without a Blemish.

CUTICURA REMEDIES WORK WONDERS.



"As I was a sufferer with eczema I write to tell you what a great friend I found in Cuticura Remedies. In six months I had tried three doctors, but did not get any better. It was on my body and on my feet so thick that I could hardly put a pin on me without touching eczema. My face was covered, my eyebrows came out, and then it got in my eye. I then went to another doctor. He asked me what I was taking for it, and I told him Cuticura, and that was a very good thing, but that he thought that my face would be marked for life. But Cuticura did the work and my face is now just as clear as it ever was.

"My brother-in-law told me about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies. I took his advice and got the Ointment, Soap, and Resolvent. I washed with the Cuticura Soap and then applied the Ointment, and took Cuticura Resolvent as directed. In a short time my face began to get better, and when I had taken one bottle of Resolvent I could brush the scales off my face like a powder. When I had taken four bottles my face was as clear as ever.

"I told all my friends about my remarkable cure. I feel so thankful that I was everyday far and wide to know what Cuticura can do. It is a sure cure for eczema. (Signed) Mrs. Emma White, Merrimac Place, Camden, N. J., April 25, 1905."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for every Skin, Scalp, and Blood Humor, consisting of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, the set costs $1.25. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston. Mailed Free, "How to Cure Eczema."

SOLDIERS' FIELD, Cambridge, May 9.—Full of confidence as the result of their 2 to 0 victory over Amherst on Saturday, the team that Harvard had hard work to beat 2 to 1 on Soldiers' Field three days before, the Williams nine met the Crimson ball tossers on the varsity diamond here this afternoon. The Harvard men were anxious to make up for the defeat that they had suffered at the hands of Holy Cross and glimpsed about in their preliminary work as though they meant business.

Captain Stephenson had stated the Freshman south paw Hartford to pitch against the Williams nine, with the diminutive Greene in reserve. Hartford had great speed and quick breaks when he warmed up. Ford, the man who administered the whitewash broth to Amherst was in possession for Williams.

The Harvard nine was weakened by the absence of the big first baseman, Burr, who was laid off on account of a case of tonsilitis. McLarin took his place.

$45,000 PAID FOR A COLT

NEW YORK, May 9.—For a sum said on the best of authority to be $45,000, Paul Ramey one of two boomers who inherited great fortunes from their father, a steamland merchant identified with big coal and coke interests, purchased from Newton Bennington the two-year-old chestnut colt Demmed, by Goldfinch out of Grackenny.

Demmed has run but one race, but won with such ease that experts predicted that he can beat Skeleton Stake at Belmont Park at its meeting. Since his only effort in public Demmed has worked half a mile in 48 1-5 seconds. This is said to be the fastest trial ever shown by horses of any age except that made by Ballyhoo Bey two years ago over the same course.

Demmed is engaged in many valuable stakes. The price paid for the colt is the second highest ever paid in America for a colt of that age. When the late William C. Whitney purchased Sysonby from Frank Taste, the sum of $41,000 was named as the consideration, and this is the largest ever given for a two-year-old here.

The Hoodoo on the Team

BY HARRY B. METCALF.

"Oh, what can be the hoodoo that has landed on the team?"
The fans of dear old Boston town in unison do scream.
Why is it that our pets of yore are lagging in the race,
And daily strengthening the clinch they have upon last place?
Why is it that old Cyrus Young, the King that used to be,
And Tannehill, the Southpaw, get their bumps so cruelly?
Why is it that Buck Freeman, he of home-run fame so fine,
Cannot on the curving spheroid get a solitary line?
Why is it that our Captain Jim, and Freddy, Hobe and Chief,
Apparently have clean forgot the way to do the trick?
Why is it that Big Bill Dinneen, George Winter and the rest,
Allow their spry opponents all a daily batting fest?
They once were Boston's cherished champs, but that is now a dream—
Oh, what can be the hoodoo that has landed on the team?

We'll win to-day. Sure thing. . . . nothing to it. The one best bet of the lay. Cinch. Can't lose.

My advertised good thing is a sure starter at American League park this afternoon, and I advise my clients to get aboard early. Take the first betting if the odds will be sure to be cut before they go to the post.

Jockey Cy Young will be in the saddle, and don't set the fact that he carries some overweight scare you off.

Don't pay any attention to the dope. There's a way you can figure this game to win that performances cut no ice in this race. I'm simply handing you a little inside info, and you have only yourself to castle if you don't toll home in and cash.

I confess I threw you down hard yesterday. My horse got off even with the field, and took the lead by a length at the quarter. At the half it was neck and neck. Then we trailed to the turn for home.

Coming through the stretch we let out a wrap, and with a furious burst of speed raced up on even terms with the leader. But the exertion told, and we faded away to nothing at the finish, while the other fellow won easy off.

But that's all right. There'll be a different story tell to-day. A few pills and a hypodermic syringe will do the business, and you'll see my horse make a runaway race of it.

Pay no attention to those rallbirds that congregate around the three-quarter pole. If they give you any game of talk, just bet 'em in a standstill. Beg, borrow or steal everything in sight, and then put up your necks.

Remember, I'm handing out this copper plated, lead pipe free of charge. I'm giving you a chance to put yourself on easy street for the rest of your natural. All I ask in return is 5 per cent. of your winnings. Send by money order, registered letter or postage stamps. Positively no attention paid to checks. I'm from Missouri.

P. S.—If by any theometrable chance the good thing doesn't go through, I have one up my sleeve for Thursday that positively can't miss.

Let's wipe off the slate and start fresh again. Let's forget that awful nightmare and have only pleasant dreams.

At that, the awful doubling the boys received which was issued May 3 and which takes effect on June 3 will, however, overcome all these questionable points. It gives the commission full authority to act and prepare rules and regulations governing motor vehicles.

Governor Guild and the members of his Council are to-day making an official inspection of the General Reformatory. They left Boston early this morning in motor vehicles, this form of transportation having been granted to each member. Governor Guild is an ardent motorist, thoroughly enjoying his ride on all of the different forms of outdoor amusement. His idea relative to the regulation of motor vehicles on the highway was, perhaps, best shown in his inaugural address, which contained many interesting recommendations on this point. The cars used on this trip were a Winton, Columbia and a White steamer.

Mr. Briscoe of the Mcgwell-Briscoe Company left for Providence yesterday. He spent considerable of his time in company with Mr. Mcgwell and Mr. Tyler. Mr. Briscoe is delighted with the work of the season that has just closed. The increase in business and work on the two racing machines is progressing rapidly, but it would be impossible to get either of them finished in season to do battle at the coming Readville meet. Mr. Briscoe left this forenoon in Tarrytown yesterday on a tour to Wilkesbarre, Pa., where he drive in the hill climbing contests.

The turn of the tide seems to be at hand at White Corporation building, where steadily increasing among the automobilists of this city and vicinity are those who have been similar sights on foreign roads. Except in the cases of men identified with the industry, nearly all those making long trips abroad have been prone to use foreign cars. A change in this direction now is discovering that the continued purchase of foreign cars is mostly an extravagance. A number of prominent men, formerly patrons of French cars, have picked American winners and already they have begun to introduce them abroad.

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—The rubber game in the series between the Boston National Club and the Quakers will be played this afternoon. The Quakers took the opening game after a bitter struggle, while the Bostons had a rather easy time of it yesterday.

Little Cy Young will do the pitching for the Bostons this afternoon. He hasn't worked since his victory over the world's champion Giants last Saturday.

Young is in grand form, and as he has always proved an enigma to the locals, it is thought that he won't have much difficulty in winning to-day.

Lush may be the pitcher selected by Manager Duffy to pitch to-day.

The Bostons won over the Phillies yesterday, 7 to 1. Dinneen was in the box for the winners, and he made a good job of it.

Pittenger, the one-time Boston pitcher, was the man used by the home team. He was touched up so freely that he was obliged to retire in favor of Hitchie, who did a little better work than his predecessor.

PENN TO PLAY CONTESTS WITH HARVARD NINE

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—Penn will play its baseball game with the Harvard nine after all. The board of directors of the Pennsylvania University were in session three hours yesterday, and after much bitter debate, decided to play all the games on this year's schedule. Penn's game with Harvard are scheduled one here Saturday and one at Cambridge June 9.

The resolution drawn up reads something like this: It is the sense of this meeting that at this date no action should be taken regarding the baseball games with Harvard.

Several hundred students waited outside the gymnasium until word came out that the Harvard games were not cancelled. The announcement was not cheered.

McGARRY DOWNED COFFEY.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Amby McGarry, the local welterweight, scored another victory at the Mobile A. C. to-night, when Kid Coffey, of Brooklyn, in a six-round bout at catchweights. In another round or two Jack Guerry would have put his opponent away.

WORCESTER, May 8.—Holy Cross met Syracuse University this afternoon in the initial game played in Worcester between the two teams in five years. Since the game with Harvard, Coach Lange has changed somewhat the batting order of Holy Cross, and the change has proved a manifest improvement in the stickwork of the local team.

Mansfield was in the box for Holy Cross, Stein, who was slated to begin the game being reserved for Saturday's contest against Yale. Inasmuch as Syracuse was defeated yesterday by Yale, the outcome of to-day's game will be significant for local fans in doping the result of the Holy Cross-Yale game to be played on Elliot Field Saturday.

B. L. S. SHUT OUT BY OLD RIVAL

In the Boston High School League series English High administered a decisive defeat to its old time rival, Boston Latin School, by the score of 8—0. Hidwell, the high school pitcher, pitched masterly ball and had the losers at his mercy throughout the contest. Reardon's hit to left was the only safe one made off his delivery. Although a large crowd was present no report has been received from the Latin School's field was poor.

AUTOISTS TO SHOW ONLY ONE NUMBER

By J. C. KERRISON.

Local motorists are naturally much interested in the result of the Walter Clapp, jr., case in the Municipal Court yesterday. It will be remembered that Mr. Clapp was summoned on a charge of violating the rules and regulations of the Highway Commission in not displaying two numbers on his car. Evidence was offered to show that, although the highway commissioners had caused such a regulation to be printed on the certificate of registration, it had not, according to the contention of the defendant's lawyer, ever been made to be passed as a portion of the rules and regulations. Viewing this in that light, Judge Sullivan ruled for the dismissal of the defendant. This decision will bring to the front once more the question of the form of the registration certificate, which will surely have the advantage of being uniform.

The Highway Commission, while not desiring to enter into any controversy over the matter, calls attention to one section of its annual report, which points out the present law instructs the Highway Commission to prescribe the application blank for registration, containing the name, residence and address of the applicant, and the general data pertaining to the motor vehicle, including a number to each form and containing such further provisions as said commission may determine. If this action authorizes the Highway Commission to make regulations, said regulations must be printed on the certificate of registration.

It further points out that the statutes the commission claims that it has certain duties to perform and has performed them in the only way possible. The certificate of registration carries all the regulation, and it is not necessary to incorporate the same in any other way, in order to make them legal.

It is further contended that the commission made further rules and regulations which would be outside of its jurisdiction under the present law regulating the use and operation of motor vehicles. The new law regulating the use of which was passed May 3 and which takes effect on June 3 will, however, overcome all these questionable points. It gives the commission full authority to act and prepare rules and regulations governing motor vehicles.

FOR THEIR BOUT IN LOS ANGELES FRIDAY NIGHT

ATTELL AND HERMAN ARE FIT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—Kid Herman and Abe Attell are putting the few finish fog touches on their preparations for Friday night's bout. In point of respect the fight will be noteworthy one. Herman's work in the past two years entitles him to serious consideration as the coming man at his weight.

Of Attell's position at the top of the ladder there is no question. There being no challenger for a draw decision, one of these great little Hebrews must step down to make room for the other. Just at the present stage of the game neither lad can well afford to lose.

Attell's Long Record.

Attell began fighting in 1900 in San Francisco. Between August and December he has little fewer fought sixteen battles, winning every one of them by the knockout route. Only these men of the sixteen stayed as long as four rounds, and one of the three was Eddie Hanlon. Yet the San Franciscans did not recognize a coming world beater by any noteworthy one. Many of the unfortunate fighters who never seemed to have the gallery with them. The San Francisco fight fans wanted to see him whipped. He finally got his chance, and he did whip them down and then went East.

Attell fought thirteen fights in Colorado and won eleven of them. The other two were draws, and both with George Dixon. The great little negro had just started down the hill and his naming by McGovern. Attell fought Dixon again in St. Louis, and that time Abraham won, and the Californians began to realize that they had overlooked a great little fighter. In 1902 Attell fought many good men, with the loss of only one battle, and that to Benny Yanger. He beat Kid Broad and Herrera and took a draw with Harry Forbes. Then the Easterners began to boost Attell's stock, and since long he has had his date card well filled with the best matches obtainable.

Beat Herman Once.

In 1904 Attell fought Kid Herman a six-round bout in Chicago, and won the decision, and the same year he won again over Herrera. It must be remembered that in nearly all his fights Attell has been conceding weight to his opponents. Last year Attell fought Nelson a six-round fight in Philadelphia, and then was no decision. The Eastern sporting writers were allowed to decide, giving the award to Attell on his cleverness, though the latter had the great disadvantage over the short course.

There being no man in this country to claim the featherweight title, and Attell at the weight, he has been regarded as the champion in his class. Any young man who can step into the ring with lighter weights, and good ones, at that, beating them with their handicap in weight, should be a world's champion.

Attell is twenty-two years old, a careful, clean-living sort of a chap, and the one who should be good for several years at the game. He reached the top early in life and is not ready for the down grade.

Herman is also a twenty-three years old and has been fighting since 1900, and has had many battles with Attell. Both men have been seen in the ring since the six-round, fast knockouts. He is a strong game negro of the clever sort. Out of thirty-five fights he fought eighty-three of them in Chicago and the other two in Milwaukee, losing only two battles out of the lot. He has been boxed in the past four years, fighting all over the East. It was not until the past year that he came to the Pacific coast. His fights with Hanlon and Herrera stamped him as a lad of great class, and his fight with Attell will do more to fix his position than either one of the other battles. In Herrera he met the Mexican at his worst form fifteen rounds and was forced to a limit in the last five rounds when the Mexican began to fight like real fight.

Attell Knows the Tricks.

Attell is everywhere regarded as the cleverest, most scientific fighter of his weight in the world. He knows every trick, every turn in the roped square. Herman must carry the battle to Abe from start to finish, for in straightaway boxing Attell will surely outpoint the Chicago boy just as he outpointed him once before.

Herman can go twenty rounds and finish like a whirlwind. Attell is also at home over the long route, but the boy with the shorter route will surely have the advantage Friday night.

There is no trouble about the weight, for they are meeting at catch weights. Probably Herman will have five pounds the better of the argument. Herman is favorite in the betting at odds of 10 to 8.

BOSTON BLUES WANT GAMES.

Boston Blues want games away from home. Rockport, Peabody, Saxonville, Dean A. C. and them preferred, for guarantee, next Saturday. Open dates, May 19 and 26 and June. Manager, E. J. Feeley, 4 Nealy, Hyland, Britt and Nelson. This is enough to make me will, and I am confident that the referee will name me as the victor."

Hector McInnis has accepted the position of referee, and everyone knows that means a fair and square deal, not only to both boys, but to the public as well.

In the opening bout of six rounds, two rivals from Cambridge, Ralph Kelly and Al Bates, will clash, while in the second contest Young Kioby and Jimmy Nilson, both of Lawrence, will meet.

The show will start promptly at 8 o'clock, so as to permit the out of town members to catch their trains.

TERRIFIC MILL AT CHELSEA TO-NIGHT

When the gong rings to-night for the opening round of the fifteen-round contest between Matty Baldwin and Kid Goodman a tremendous crowd will greet the little gladiators. Members of the Lincoln Club are to turn out strong, because these boys will bring to the front two members of the Lincoln Club Champion will be well supported by good ring judges. The aggressive little Hebrew shows that he is imbued with new life and ambition, and his eyes sparkle with excitement, like a thoroughbred race horse that is eager for the fray.

Goodman openly says he will do his best, and that if the fight is lost he will lose it fairly and honestly. "I've been careless in the past," said Abe yesterday, "but I know if I beat Baldwin I will get a chance at Nealy, Hyland, Britt and Nelson. This is enough to make me will, and I am confident that the referee will name me as the victor."

THE FIRST SPRING HAT---AND HOW IT CAME TO BE INVENTED

THIS HAIR KEEPS GETTING IN MY EYES ALL THE TIME!
THIS IS A FINE SPOT FOR AN AFTERNOON BEAUTY-RESTORER NAP.
THE FASHIONABLE MILLINER
DO YOU WEAR THE BIRDS OR THE NEST?
THIS NEW STYLE MAY LOOK FINE BUT I CAN SEE IT'S GOING TO COST ME HEAPS OF CLAM SHELLS!
WHERE'S THE AUDUBON SOCIETY?

HOW THE MILLINER FIRST CAME TO BE A FACTOR IN THE COMMUNITY

TRULY trifling accidents sometimes decide the course of great affairs. The horseshoe nail that decided the fate of the historic battle has stood for years as the great exemplar of the terrible consequences that result from little things, but at last it bids fair to be relegated to the shelf and supplanted by a still more wonderful occurrence.

The same reliable investigator who recently usurped the astonished world that tremors were simply the result of an accident to the apron of an ancient dweller by the Nile has been looking into the subject of millinery, and we find remarkable facts bearing on the development of headgear.

Somewhere about 3600 B. C. a charming leader of the social set of those times found her wind-blown tresses a serious discomfort, and bound them close to her temples with a twisted cord of fibre or grass.

Thus the fillet came to be the universally adopted headdress, and before long every real lady who thought anything of social preferment was wearing one.

The next chapter in the development of the headdress was when a lady wearing a fillet about her dusky brown locks got quite under a tree one hot afternoon, and a mischievous ape gambolling in the branches overhead suddenly felt impelled to try the effect of a feather inserted into the fillet.

When the young lady in question awoke from her light slumber she felt the need of something to assuage the thirst which the modern soda counter provides for us in the good old summer time, and knelt down at a pool.

The gaudy feather in her hair shone resplendent in the silver water, and she beheld herself arrayed as no other woman of her acquaintance had ever been.

Behold the first bonnet, the bonnet primeval, so to speak. And being a young lady of determination, she saw her opportunity.

The effect on local society was electrical, and imitators sprung up over night. Those who had feathers among their treasures hastened to fall into line with the original discoverer of the style.

In the Springtime naturally a few flowers were added, and very soon girls who found they had lesser worth cash set up in business and the woman who had the money, but lacked the ability to make her own hats, was able to command the aid of the milliner.

Chickens' heads, bits of cloth, and in fact almost anything to catch the eye were added, and with the lapse of years and the competition of many milliners we have the marvels of to-day, the secrets of which no man knoweth, and the cost of which looks like the annual premium on the family insurance policy.

WHAT IS TRUE LOVE?

—By—

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"WHAT is true love, Miss Fairfax?"

Hardly a day passes but that question is asked in some form or other.

The questioner is usually very young. She is interested in some young man, and she wonders if this interest is the "real thing."

When the "real thing" comes she will not need to ask me, nor any one else. She will know it by a hundred doubts and joys and fears and jealousies and scruples.

She may mistake passing fancies for real love, but she never will mistake real love for a passing fancy.

Sometimes she will give anything in the world if she could.

For love is not all joy. Little anxious seekers after wisdom.

It is the best thing in the world and the one indispensable thing, but it has its sorrows, and you must learn to take the bitter with the sweet.

If you fear that you will not know your own heart when the time comes, here are a few rules to go by.

They are as old as time, and will last as long as eternity. So you can't go astray in following them:

When all the music on earth sings to you only one song you may know it is love.

When the whole light of the world goes out with the going of one man you may know it is love.

When you die bubbling with joy for no apparent reason and sink in the depths of woe for the same reason, you may know it is love.

There is a great deal of high-flown talk about perfect love being free from jealousy.

I am afraid I cannot agree with that theory.

I have known a great many women who love well and truly, even unselfishly, but I do not believe that one of them could have looked on with equanimity while the man she loved turned his attention to another woman.

In fact, I am quite sure that they, one and all, would have been consumed with jealousy and unhappiness.

It isn't that you don't value above all else the happiness of the man you love. You want him to be happy, but you want him to be happy with you, not with another woman.

You would like to see that woman's bad qualities only, and yet all the time you are miserably aware of her good ones.

Oh, it's a horrible thing, is jealousy, and yet no human being who loves is entirely free from it.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning, who wrote the beautiful poem quoted above, knew what real love was.

She would have died for Robert Browning. She would, I think, have even given him up to another woman had she been convinced that it would have made him happier, but it would have broken her heart, and I don't think she would ever have felt any love for the other woman.

I think, girls, that you will know when real love comes to you, and it is bound to come some day, for no woman goes through life without loving, but in the meantime don't mistake the false for the true.

Wait for the right man. You'll know him when he comes.

"UNLESS"

By Elizabeth Barrett Browning

UNLESS you can think when the Song is done,
No other is soft in the rhythm,
Unless you can feel when left by one,
That all men else go with him,
Unless you can know when ungraised by his breath
That your beauty itself wants proving,
Unless you can swear for Life, for Death,
Oh, fear to call it loving.

Unless you can muse in a crowd all day
On the absent face that fix'd you,
Unless you love as the angels may
With the breath of Heav'n between you:
Unless you can dream that his faith is faint,
Through behooving and unbehooving;
Unless you can die when the dream is past—
Oh, never call it loving.

How Costly Jewels Are Safeguarded

MANY American women possess the value of a king's ransom locked within their jewel cases.

The possession of such priceless articles is a constant source of worry unless the proper precautions are taken to insure their safe keeping.

To relieve my fair readers of this valuable jewelry must:

First, send it to the jeweller every six months.

Second, keep the most valuable things in the bank.

Third, have a routine for removing and putting away jewels.

Fourth, have a distinct receptacle for each ornament, so that an empty space will tell of a missing piece.

Fifth, insure all valuables against theft.

Sixth, if one piece is displayed in an advertisement printed, offer a sufficient reward.

It is not only thieves one has to guard against for the preservation of their jewels, but the valuables themselves require constant attention.

Pearls and heavy stones must be looked after frequently by a jeweller for the setting becomes loosened if the stones fall out and is lost.

Turquoise must never be allowed to touch soap or grease, though Orientals sometimes wash their hands in soap for an hour or so in clear, clean, cold water.

Pearls grow dull if worn in the presence of perfumes, but to improve the beauty and the condition of their skin nothing is better than to place them in a solution of sea water, and put the tumbler in the sun.

People suffering from certain diseases must never wear pearls. They have been known when set in a ring to perish down to their very base.

Those taking certain drugs must lay their pearls aside for the time or they will discolor.

When arriving at a hotel the best thing to do is to give all jewels, money and valuables at once into the keeping of the manager.

Pointers on Making and Baking Cake

USE none but the best materials to make a successful cake, and all the ingredients should be prepared and ready to mix any of them. Eggs beat up much lighter and sooner by being placed in a cold place some time before using them; a small pinch of soda sometimes helps them to froth.

Flour should always be sifted before using. Even if carter or baker has done so, she should be thoroughly sifted with the other dry ingredients, where it will, in some moderately soft, but not melted butter, or cake will be sodden and heavy.

Sugar should be rolled and sifted; spices ground or pounded; raisins or any other fruit looked over and prepared; currants, especially, should be nicely washed, picked, dried in a cloth, and then carefully examined, that no trace of grit or stone may be left among them.

Every utensil then be laid on a dish before the mix is to become thoroughly dry; for, if added damp to the other ingredients, cakes will be liable to be heavy.

Eggs should be separated, the whites and yolks separately, the yolks to a thick cream, the whites until they are a stiff froth; then add the butter and sugar to a cream, then add the beaten yolks, then the milk, then the flour, then the beaten whites, and lastly the flour.

How to Use Fruit

If fruit is to be used, measure and dredge with a little sifted flour, stir in gradually and thoroughly.

Add all to well-battered cake pans. While the cake is baking, care should be taken that no cold air reaches it, as it is only when completely set that the cake is taking properly; the oven should be as even, moderate heat as you can get it, not too hot; much depends on this for success.

Cake is often spoiled by being looked at too often when first put into the oven. For the first half hour before the cake is put in, which can be done by throwing on the top of the oven a dishcloth, wring out of cold water, and in proportion to one level teaspoonful of soda, two heaping teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar will be a good substitute.

When sour milk is called for in the recipe, use only soda. Cakes made with sour milk will bake much more easily than those made with sugar.

Never cream either the butter and sugar in creamed, but beat it down from the bottom up, and over; this lets air into the cake batter, and produces little air cells which cause the dough to puff and swell when it comes in contact with the heat while cooking.

When making most cakes, especially sponge cake, the flour should be added by degrees, stirred very slowly and lightly, for if stirred hard and fast it will make it heavy and tough.

Cakes should be kept in tight cake-tins or earthen jars, in a cool dry place.

Cookies, jumbles, ginger-snaps, etc., require a quick oven; if they become moist or soft by keeping, put again into the oven for a few minutes.

Sidney Warwick

"I AM glad you came to me for help," Herries said, "and, of course, whatever help lies in my power to give is yours freely. I may not have the power long, since no doubt the man intends to trade on my fears, and will ultimately in some drunken moment, let out the secret——"

"Look," Some one is coming. We shall be seen!" whispered Olga, suddenly.

Herries looked quickly around.

Dick Grantham had just vaulted over the boundary fence and was coming along the path through the trees by which Herries, Olga and Delamere had come when Olga Vail intercepted them. They drew back out of sight.

"Is that man your friend?" whispered Olga in sudden breathless eagerness.

He nodded.

"A friend that you can implicitly trust?"

"Yes. Why?" he asked.

"Oh, I say only," she whispered in suppressed excitement, "a way of getting rid of Delamere, of throwing him completely off the scent. Listen," and the woman who loved John Herries spoke a few, low, hurried words.

"If it could be done!" cried Herries eagerly, a gleam of hope breaking in his face.

Not a Joke

"It can be done—at least, it can be tried," Olga urged in desperate eagerness. "Even if the plan fails you are in no worse position. And it must not fail!"

"Yes, at least it can be tried!" cried Herries. "Keep well out of sight behind these trees, while I speak to my friend."

He went quickly forward and called cautiously to Grantham. The other turned.

"Hello, Jack! Where on earth did you spring from? What are you looking so mysterious about?" Grantham cried.

"I want you to do something for me, Dick. A few minutes ago I saw a disreputable old woman in the company of Delamere call. Delamere's a man I knew in the days when I had no idea of ever succeeding to Herries's millions—a hanger on of sporting folks, but I always knew by the name of Herries, but evidently he's got a swell-ton somehow who I am, and it is equally evident he's come to find out if his surmise is correct," said Herries hurriedly. "He's a man whose acquaintance I don't want to renew. Will you go and get rid of him for me?"

"With all the pleasure in life. But am I to kick this Mr. Delamere out—the name, Delamere—or what am I to do?" asked Grantham with a laugh, wondering that his friend should take a trivial matter so seriously.

"No, a much simpler method than that. I can tell you in half a dozen words what I want you to do."

Grantham stared at his friend doubtfully for a moment, as Herries told him his plan; then an amused smile appeared at the corners of his mouth.

"Right you are. If you wait here you'll see Mr. Delamere take a cross-fallen call!" he laughed, walking toward the house.

Herries did not laugh.

What had seemed a capital joke to his friend was a matter of deadly earnest to him. Unless Delamere could be got rid of, his whole future would be threatened.

CHAPTER XXII.

Freddy Is Puzzled

MR. FREDDY DELAMERE sat in the library, where the footman had placed him, to wait for the return of John Herries.

The servant had admitted that Mr. Herries was likely to return shortly, and rather reluctantly he had allowed the visitor to go inside, since Mr. Delamere assured him with a most persuasive face that he and the millionaire were old friends, and that Herries would never forgive him if his old friend left without seeing him.

The man had not been quite so confident; there was something about the visitor's manner that left him doubtful, and Mr. Delamere had called him "old chap" once.

In reading the advertisement that had been cut from the newspaper, the name of Herries had struck him with a sense of familiarity. It was a minute or two before he pierced the fugitive memory down. Where had he heard the name of Herries before? The remembrance came back to him in a flash.

One day months ago when he had called at the March flat John March was writing a letter to his wife on the subject of an engagement at one of the theatres.

He had handed the letter when finished to his wife to glance over; and she had cried:

"Why, whatever have you signed yourself Herries for? Is it Herries or Herring? Look, Freddy," she cried with a shrill laugh at her own humorous sally, "my husband is Herring—Sigismund Herring!"

John March had grown red and confessed and said that he must have been dreaming, for that he had been talking that day to a man called Herries, so offered some such excuse for this odd mistake.

Mr. Freddy Delamere had thought little of it—would probably have forgotten utterly the incident, which John March had himself, but for Zingara's accompanying remarks, which had set him laughing heartily. But when he saw what the misstep in spelling might mean, it struck him that was something in the double coincidence; there was no fool.

What more likely, he reflected, than that Herries was March's real name, which he had signed absentmindedly? And then this advertisement for a John Herries who had disappeared. Mr. Delamere had already constructed a romance from those scanty materials, in which a man had lavished heavy bribes by means of this advertisement, Herries, the footman, had told all.

He was in the midst of these reflections when the object of them entered.

"Mr. Herries has returned and will see you in a minute or two," said the footman.

How to Tell Fresh Laid Eggs From Old Ones

IS putting the hand round the egg, and presenting to the light, the end which is generally found empty. Should a dirty spots can be detected, it is not new laid, but may be very good for all ordinary purposes except boiling soft. If there is a large spot near the shell, it is bad, and should not be used on any account.

The white of a newly-laid egg looked quite like clear jelly, but in a day or two it looks like rice boiled in milk; and that of an old egg completely fluid, and of a dirty color. A cook ought not to give eggs two or three days old to her master and mistress for fresh eggs, under the delusion that they will not find any difference, but if they should do it out in a moment, not only by the appearance, but also by the taste.

THE SECRET OF BEING FASCINATING

By Irma Langdon

ADMIRING and loving are quite different things. Though often confounded, for how frequently do we hear a man say, "Oh, yes, I like her very much, but she is not the kind of woman I could fall in love with!"

What first attracts a man is beauty, what holds a man is charm, and a woman may be very lovely, yet possesses no retentive charm. Thus it is we see a beautiful woman losing her grip on a man's affection, while a plain woman does not do so.

Why this should be is rather a vexed question, but as a general rule it will be found in such cases that there is some other than mere physical beauty, no beauty, it may be, of intelligence, feeling, or sympathy. It matters not how exquisite a woman may be in complexion and features; if there is no depth in her nature she ceases sooner or later to be attractive.

The beauty of Lady Bissington, would never have fascinated such men as Thackeray, Wellington, Brougham, Landseer and Dickens had she not been brilliant intellectually. Yet even her beauty, enhanced by her intellect, had not the same hold over men that other women have possessed, because, alas! she was shallow.

Another, the great actress, was not as beautiful, but she commanded an admiration due to her genius, and that only. Every great lover of the stage, she seemed to have little or no power to win such lasting esteem as it has been given to even very foolish women.

Why? It is evident that neither beauty nor intellect by itself, nor even united, have any permanent influence over men. In fact, there is but one irresistible charm that can conquer when intellect, beauty, position, money may all fail.

That charm is fascination. And if there were such things as fairies to give gifts to mortals the best gift a woman could ask for would be the gift of fascination. What strange, indefinable influence that exercises such a strong magnetic influence over everyone.

There are two types of fascination, natural fascination and cultivated fascination, and, as in everything else, the natural charm far exceeds in beauty, depth and influence the artificial one, which often degenerates into absolute hypocrisy and a social veneer, impressing without convincing.

Just as some birds with the plainest plumage have the sweetest song, so some women with the plainest faces have the greatest fascination.

Love and attraction is sympathy, a real, genuine sympathy, but some people mistake gush for sympathy, and are surprised when they find attractive, as gush is but forced feeling, possessing no sincerity whatever.

You may call some girls a nice, sympathetic girl, though the gentle, appealing woman who can hardly force a word without fear and trembling, who faints at the sight of a mouse, or shrinks at the sight of a mother before marriage than she can afterward, as the charm of helplessness that may be fascinating in a fiancee becomes a bore in the wife.

Such femininity without helplessness is much more lasting in its grip on a man's affection, and when united to true sympathy, tact and intelligence forms an irresistible force of fascination. Tactful, intelligent sympathy, which can comprehend another's most trivial joy and deepest pleasure, and another's slightest grief and keenest sorrow is the magnet that draws around a woman a circle of ardent friends.

Everyone craves for sympathy, and perhaps men do so more than women, and as this craving is unconsciously selfish, a woman must be ready to give her sympathy without hope of return, and then she may perhaps one day get her reward in a lifelong friendship or love.

A Lesson in System and Organization

The Forceful Example Given by the Military in San Francisco Ought to Have a Lasting Power.

The value of system and organization was never better illustrated than in the work of the army doctors and surgeons in handling the emergency into which they were plunged by the earthquake and fire, and that lesson could well impress itself upon those in charge of the regeneration of San Francisco.

Those military doctors did not hesitate to assume responsibility, and if San Francisco escapes an epidemic—and it seems certain that she will—the major part of the credit will be due to the organization and system of the army's medical department and to the quick action of the medical men in charge at the Presidio.

When the injured were hurriedly transferred from the Mechanics Pavilion the Presidio General Hospital was forced to receive one hundred patients in an hour. But there was not the slightest confusion though the terror of the great shock was still fresh.

Captain Kennedy, the surgeon in charge, immediately closed the doors against all visitors. This was hard on anxious relatives and friends, but it preserved quiet and discipline within the hospital at a time when quiet and discipline were absolutely essential.

The hundred patients were operated on and cared for before the burning hospitals of the city began to throw their patients into the Presidio, and when everything was confusion elsewhere the five hundred and more patients in the military hospital were treated as if earthquake and fire were troubles of a far land.

Then came the more important work of caring for the medical and surgical needs of the homeless and taking charge of the sanitation of the different refugee camps established.

Here things again proceeded with military precision. Colonel Torney placed Captain Truby in charge of the refugees in Golden Gate Park; Captain Murtagh of those who clustered about Fort Mason, and Captain Rutherford suddenly built camp at the Presidio. Each of these surgeon-captains organized a staff of doctors and inspectors.

Soon there was as much order as if the people were settled in their [illegible] homes. Every patient had a doctor at call and each case was [illegible]ched with exceptional care. The camps were platted and mapped [illegible]e work of sanitation. There were appointed men who took charge [illegible] different sections. Under them worked the inspectors.

[illegible]n every foot of the refugee camps were inspected daily. Reports [illegible] from the inspectors to their superiors and these reported to the [illegible]aptains, who in turn reported to Colonel Torney. In this way [illegible]r of an epidemic getting started because of unsanitary con-[illegible]he camps was reduced to a minimum.

[illegible]e result is seen in the fact that the reports of death and [illegible]n Francisco show no variation from normal conditions.

[illegible] those who are going to have on hand the herculean task [illegible] the ruined city may well take a lesson on what can be [illegible]nder system and organization.

[illegible] been given that lesson by the men of the army medical [illegible] took hold of an emergency as if they had been handling [illegible]fires all their lives.

[illegible]for [illegible]s to [illegible]e Money

[illegible]'s Mr. Aldrich [illegible]VE the Chance?

Possibly you have followed the discussion about the larger production of alcohol.

You know that alcohol is so heavily taxed by the government that at present it is impossible to use it except in very small and expensive ways outside of the [illegible]hiskey and similar beverages.

[illegible]ntelligent plan to arrange matters so that alcohol may [illegible] great quantities without in any way increasing the [illegible]hol that people DRINK.

[illegible]idea in putting the enormous and prohibitive government [illegible]hol is to keep people from drinking great quantities of it, [illegible] give the government the desired revenue derived from the [illegible]ong drink.

[illegible]hol can be treated in a way that "denaturizes" it. Denaturized [illegible] is arranged in such a manner THAT IT IS ABSOLUTELY IM-[illegible]SIBLE FOR HUMAN BEINGS TO DRINK IT. At the same time [illegible]naturized alcohol is extremely valuable as a fuel and in all sorts [illegible]anufactures, etc. If the tax were taken off of all the alcohol that is [illegible]used for drinking and intoxicating purposes there would be an [illegible]rmous increase in the production AND A GREAT ADDITION TO THE [illegible]LTH OF THE FARMERS.

Alcohol can be produced from all sorts of vegetable substances, [illegible]d it is invaluable in many ways. For instance, it can be produced [illegible]ore cheaply than Mr. Rockefeller's present price for gasoline. And it [illegible]would be infinitely more valuable as a motive force in automobiles than [illegible]gasoline at present.

An automobile run by alcohol leaves no dreadful odor behind it. And the alcohol is superior in other ways.

Every big farm and little farm would be greatly increased in its possibilities of wealth production if the government would permit the farmers and others to produce alcohol without the prohibitive tax.

This would not diminish the government's income at all, since the present amount of alcohol used in intoxicating drinks and taxed by the government would still be taxed and NOT be diminished. There would simply be an enormous addition to the national wealth; there would also be COMPETITION FOR THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY.

But right there, gentlemen, comes the great double-barrelled BUT. Mr. Rockefeller, mild and gentle, is still THE RULER OF THIS COUNTRY. And what he wants YOU HAVE GOT TO WANT, FELLOW-CITIZENS. It seems that Mr. Rockefeller just now does not want the farmers to make alcohol. He doesn't think they need to make any money in that way.

Who is the most powerful man in the United States? Rockefeller. What is the highest lawmaking power in the United States? The Senate. Who is the most powerful man in the Senate? Aldrich. And who is ALDRICH? HE IS THE FATHER-IN-LAW OF MR. ROCKEFELLER'S PIOUS SON JOHN.

Already Senator Aldrich, father-in-law of Rockefeller's pious boy, has declared that this denaturized alcohol bill must go very slowly. He says that HE must have "PLENTY OF TIME FOR INVESTIGATION."

The country in general, and the farmers especially, are about to have another proof of the fact THAT THE PEOPLE DO NOT RUN THIS COUNTRY.

Here is an opportunity of adding enormously to the national wealth and of helping the farmer class—the most useful to the nation and most deserving of encouragement.

But Mr. Aldrich's Rockefeller doesn't want it. And that "but" settles it.

The Lost Ball

By Wex Jones

RED PATSY looked upon his men: his bosom swelled with pride.
For in the Asphalt pennant race they'd got the leader tied.

And now the Holy Terrors frowned; they gave their pants a hitch
(A youngster's buttons won't stay on, no matter how you stitch).
Red Patsy looked around the field; he gave his pants a hitch.
And with a most ferocious scowl he started in to pitch.

Alas! Third strike the catcher muffed —a wagon bumped him one—
The batsman slipped beneath the horse, and scored a neat home run.

AT length the Terrors went to bat.
First up was Mike McGann,
Who hit three-fifty year before—a mighty slugging man.
He rubbed his shoeless feet with dust, then—Biff! Gee! What a smash!
But the Terrors' spreading grin of joy was ended by a crash.
The Topsies beat it down the street, the Terrors dart like trout,
And none but Captain Patsy stays to see the trouble out;
For the window that was shattered belonged to Widow Kling.
And no one in the tenement had such a hand or tongue.

THE Widow Kling comes blazing out, a ladle in her hand;
And woe the urchin victim on whom that club may land.
Red Patsy, scared, but grim and game, is peeping round a stull,
For in his heart he'd vowed a vow that he'd retrieve the ball.
The Widow Kling looks all around, then, at a heading pace,
She rolls across the diamond and grabs the teams' first base.
It was none other than her mat, they'd swiped right from her hall;
But long before she picks it up Red Patsy has the ball.

Jottings

By Rev. Charles A. Crane

NOW that the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs has determined that the bill-board nuisance be abated, abated it will be. If you will note the advertisements on these boards, you will see that the goods there commended are such as women buy, and their refusal to purchase goods offensively displayed on housetops and streets will quickly cure the evil.

You will discover that the sole reason for the failure of the National Senate to give us free alcohol whereby we may have cheaper light and fuel is in one word, and that is the magic word by which not a few saints swear—Rockefeller.

Stage-Struck Girls Better Think Twice

By Clara Morris

WITH every schoolgirl the heart is set on Juliet—even the early death and Capulet's tomb have no terrors. Or if she have the figure and manner she might prefer to don the masculine garb, as Rosalind or Viola. Juliet, though, is the general training companion.

They look into Shakespeare's page as into a mirror and see themselves reflected in the embodiment they would present. They feel they are capable of something. School culture has given them at best only the alphabet of education, the key to open the door of a career.

In the multitude of callings at present offered, the cleverest among them are confused and bewildered in regard to the special work for which they are best fitted, and the stage offers the saving grace to their minds.

To get into other professions some sort of special schooling and training and a proof of fitness are prerequisites; but it seems every girl thinks that she is a born actress.

The stage is well acquainted with these clever girls in the wrong places; this throwing away of one's talents and power to be somebody, by misusing them to develop one's self into somebody else.

No, my dears, actresses are not of instantaneous growth. We are required to wait for them, as we wait for a young orchard to bear fruit.

True, there are a few exceptionally strong natures who battle with the surging tides and force their way to the objective point as directly as the needle finds the magnetic pole. But the great majority never learn to read or find the way of their true future and best fortune.

In my day the stage had still to fight prejudice—that corroding rust which eats up the substance of the best material—but that barrier has been swept away to a great extent. The profession, then, in consequence of the aforesaid prejudice, was rather a close corporation; the recruits were generally young relatives of the older actors. There was plenty of room, and people had to begin at the bottom and work up. To-day, in the great number of applications, I would probably stand no chance.

As regards the temptations of the stage, I would say that in this profession of acting in which I have served, girl and woman, so many years, it hurts me to have one imply it is filled with strange and terrible pitfalls for women.

I have received the confidences of many workers—some in professions, others in trades—and on these confidences I have founded my belief that every woman who works for her living must eat with her bread the bitter salt of insult. Not even the plain girl escapes paying the penalty put upon her by her unprotected state.

Still, insult does not mean temptation by any means. But careful inquiry has shown me that temptation assails working women in any walk of life, and that the profession of "acting" has nothing weird or novel to offer in the line of danger—to be quite frank, all the possibilities of resisting or yielding lie with the young woman herself.

What will tempt one beyond her powers of resistance will be no temptation at all to another. In time she will learn to walk swiftly, with stony face, deaf ears and unseeing eyes, past those "hyenas" of the city streets who make life a misery to the unprotected woman.

The theatrical life, with the successful, is not always a picnic, for the way into the life is thorny, rugged and steep; and, after all, what are the annals of the stage but a few skeleton etchings? A few kindly memories transferred to the printed page form the only enduring recompense.

Yet my only word of encouragement I repeat here. There may be possibly one among you to whom the dim half-light of the theatre is dearer than the God-given radiance of the sunlight.

The burnt-out air with its indescribable odor—seemingly composed of several parts of cellar-mould, a great many parts of dry or unsunned dust, the whole veined through and through with small streaks of escaping illuminating gas—I say, if this heavy, lifeless air is more welcome to your nostrils than could be the clover sweetened breath of the greenest pasture; if that great black gulf yawning beyond the extinguished footlights makes your heart leap up at your throat; if without noting the quality or length of your part; if just the plain, bold fact of "acting something" thrills you with a nameless joy—if the rattle-bang of the ill-treated overture dances through your blood, and the rolling up of the curtain on the audience at night is to you the magic blossoming of a mighty flower—if you feel all these things, then your fate is sealed.

Nature is imperious, and through brains, heart and nerves, she cries to you "Act! Act! Act!"—and you must act—Nature has provided you with a peculiar talent and demands that you exercise it.

To that bright, energetic girl—over-educated, perhaps, with nothing to do; eager, restless (forgive me), vain—anxious to lift off of life the dull load that it bears; or to her whose daily work gives small means of pleasure—who wants to go upon the stage, I would say, pause a moment, my dears, in your home, be it ever so humble.

Look about you and see if there is not some duty, however small—the more irksome the better—that you may take from your mother's daily load; some service you can render for father, brother, sister or aunt; some household task so small you may feel contemptuous of it; yet some one must do it, and it may be a special thorn in that some one's side.

So surely as you force yourself to do the small thing nearest your hand, so surely will you be called upon for greater service.

And believe one who has lived through great experience, that a loving mother's declaration: "I don't know what I should do without my daughter," is sweeter and more precious than the rare-loss applause of strangers.
